Dividing or uniting ... It's not important when people really need space. Demountable partition walls were created to meet requirements for space and for sharing environments by adapting to different types of personalization and to different room compositions.

In it's full-height or open version, a diving wall can be used to assign different well designed work areas to different duties, while meeting the need to provide natural light to the most internally located areas in the facility.

There are a number of alternatives to choose from. For dividing walls (weather horizontal or vertical), a single or double glass sheet is available to meet the need for isolating areas at low cost. Full height walls, full height doors, coverings for full height columns... the full-height concept never bothers us. We personalize walls to suite the setting where they're placed.

In some cases, built-in blinds enable you to isolate conversations, guests and meetings. Also, they have proven very effective in reducing the glare of direct light.

Orizzontale

Open Space

Open space means creating small intervals of confidence (to flagrantly steal a definition from mathematics) while faithfully following the principle of transparency.

Integration means never having to say I'm sorry, there's no solution. A furnishing solution can always be found. It's a question of viewpoints: a door is something that either isolates or allows something through. What's important is that it blend's in perfectly with it's surroundings.

TECHNICAL DETAILS

The partition wall is 10cm thick and has a height adjustment of plus or minus 5cm. The supporting frame also has crosspieces to strengthen the skeleton structure. The inner frame is made form galvanized steel. At the base of each upright there is an adjustable foot while at the top there is a solid pressure clamp mechanism with a spring, that allows to thrust the upright itself. Both against the ceiling and against the floor the partition wall has a U-shaped galvanized steel sheet coated with epoxy/polyester powder enamel in dark grey in which the uprights are placed. Adhesive PVC seals are placed on the uprights and cross sections in order to help reduce heat loss and sound. The partition is easy to manage also because the installation conduits are passed within the structure itself.

The panels are made from melamine wood with ABS edging. The glass frames are equipped with aluminium profiles epoxy polyester powder coating. They are available in single or double glazing, clear or matt with an option of adjustable venetian blinds fitted in the space between the two glass panels.
